2013 Children's Bureau, Inc.
Annual Report

LOOKING FORWARD... to a bright future

DEAR FRIENDS

Since 1851, Children's Bureau has provided services that empower children and their families. The agency has thrived, because it has continued to grow and evolve with the changing times. The past year was no exception; it was an exciting year for Children's Bureau and for me, as the new leader. I am humbled to lead an organization with such a tremendous legacy of providing hope. The staff, volunteers, leaders and supporters of Children's Bureau, collectively, impacted lives throughout Indiana last year.

In 2013 we spent time, energy and effort looking forward and planning for the future. We crafted a strategic plan to address our challenges and identify areas of opportunity. Our eyes remain on the goal of moving the agency forward to help families reach their fullest potential. I believe that great businesses grow during difficult times and that is what is happening at Children's Bureau. We were fortunate to have a strong year, providing much needed services to more children than ever before. We remain focused on our mission to preserve families and protect the future of Indiana's children. We also continue to dream new dreams that will move the families that we serve forward.

Many things have changed over our 163 years of serving children and families, but our commitment to providing high-quality care and resources remains constant. We value the uniqueness of each individual family and are determined to provide the very best services possible to every person that this agency touches. Finally, we are forever grateful to the many partners, volunteers and donors who enable us to provide care and hope to change the lives of thousands of children each year. It is through the gifts of time, talent and resources that we have amazing impact.

Thank you for your continued support of Children's Bureau. Together you make it possible for us to move vulnerable children and families forward to happier, healthier, more fulfilled lives.

FONDLY, TINA

"We remain focused on our mission to preserve families and protect the future of Indiana's children."

Children's Bureau Auxiliary OVER THE YEARS

In 1932, a group of 22 women banded together to form the Auxiliary to the Children's Bureau of Indianapolis Orphan's Asylum. From the beginning, members raised money and provided volunteer support. For years they sponsored flower sales, tennis matches, rummage sales, puppet shows and a skating club called the Ice Crackers. They also assisted office staff by interviewing prospective adoptive parents, sponsoring foster parent/children activities, and operating a motor corps to take orphans to medical appointments.

"As the years went by, the Auxiliary remained focused on helping the Bureau through fundraising and volunteer service. Fundraisers included charity balls at the old Riverside Amusement Park on the eve of the Indianapolis 500, the Something Special gift shop in Broad Ripple, the Hoosier Dome/RCA Dome tour program (110 Auxiliary members were trained to give tours!), a Colts Tenth Anniversary Benefit, High Tea at the Governor's Residence, and fashion show luncheons. In two memorable penny drives with WIBC radio and Cub Foods, over $32,800 was raised in pennies! "

The Auxiliary also funded scholarships for Children's Bureau staff members to further their education in social work. In 1984 it established the Mallon Award for outstanding service to the Bureau in memory of 25-year director James J. Mallon.

Auxiliary members have given thousands of hours of direct service, such as cleaning, painting and decorating group homes, cooking lessons, Thanksgiving dinners, Christmas parties, birthday and graduation celebrations, activities at the crisis shelter and at group homes, clerical assistance, annual luncheons for foster parents (there was even a luncheon with the famous baby book author, Dr. Spock!), tutoring, sporting events, picnics ... and the list goes on.

"Funds raised by the Auxiliary often have gone toward expanding a child's horizons, providing music, art and dancing lessons, Scout uniforms, computers, outings to the Indianapolis Zoo and Conner Prairie, summer camp, birthday and Christmas gifts, and other enrichment activities. The Auxiliary also provides for the more mundane but necessary items like furniture, carpeting, linens, playground equipment and fencing. They even sponsor an annual underwear and school uniform drive for Bureau clients."

More than 80 years after its founding, the Children's Bureau Auxiliary has had a pivotal impact on hundreds of young lives.

our young professionals advisory board

The Young Professionals Advisory Board consists of twenty- and thirty-somethings who are passionate about helping children in Indiana while also connecting with the nonprofit community early in their careers. These professionals are philanthropically minded and the brightest of our generation! Regular social recruiting events keeps the group fresh, fundraisers keep them active, and volunteering with Children's Bureau keeps them engaged. If you would like to learn more, please contact Robert Gray at rgray@childrensbureau.org.

Creative Collaborations...

.....are proving more effective for nonprofits. Together, Promising Futures and Children's Bureau will deliver a more comprehensive and coordinated range of services in central Indiana.

In December of 2013 Children's Bureau brought Promising Futures under its umbrella. Merger talks began during the sequester last year when Promising Futures lost a large grant. The new alignment is primarily an organizational change; not one that has been widely recognized by clients and constituents of Hamilton County.

While the merger was seamless to clients, leadership from both organizations worked diligently to close the business loopholes, which included everything from transitioning federal grants to facilities and staff. The United Way of Central Indiana and the Central Indiana Community Foundation each provided support, along with the Hamilton County Council. Tina Cloer praised the efforts of the former Promising Futures board for assisting with the integration. "They were not only cooperative, but provided leadership and guidance," Tina remarked.

The merger has allowed Promising Futures to assume resources and administrative support it previously lacked. Upgrades in electronic record-keeping, technology support, improved office space, and even amenities such as landscaping and snow removal services have lifted the burden off staff members and volunteers. Additional counseling and therapy services are planned. The organization looks to move toward community or home based services, rather than being strictly office based. Moreover, Promising Futures hopes to expand offerings through the Department of Child Services.

The financial challenges experienced by Promising Futures have become common-place in the non-profit arena. The economic downturn in 2008 has had a residual effect. Federal funding, foundation dollars, grants, and even individual contributions were significantly reduced. Many agencies are still struggling to recover.

Promising Futures, a division of Children's Bureau, now has resources and infrastructure to deliver a more comprehensive and coordinated range of services. The organization has served central Indiana for 40 years and will continue to deliver quality services to families in need.
